Members Of The Clan

IN A TIME of crisis, President Kennedy has turned to his clan. The President named his brother, Attorney General Robert Kennedy, as part of a group to investigate the Central Intelligence Agency after the Cuban fiasco. It is reported that he would like to have somebody as "trustworthy" as Bobby to head the CIA.

A brother-in-law, Stephen F. Smith, was named special assistant to the head of a new super-intelligence center.

Another brother-in-law, Sargent Shriver, is heading another hot project, the Peace Corps.

The President has a big family, but fortunately the United States government employs a lot of people. Who knows? With one more crisis, there may even be room on the seat of government for another partially employed brother-in-law, actor Peter Lawford.
